

Patient enrollment is a time-consuming task that needs to be done in order to bring a trial to completion. ClinicalStudyFinder.com can take this demanding task off the to-do list.

What is ClinicalStudyFinder.com?

PatientWise has developed a great tool to get patients connected to clinical trials in their area.

ClinicalStudyFinder.com is an easy-to-navigate website providing potential patients with a resource to sign up to receive more information about clinical trials. With this established database, sites can identify clinical trial participants to meet patient population goals for conducting current and future studies. According to CenterWatch, these types of study-specific microsites increase referrals by 10 percent to 50 percent.

Recruitment Challenges:

- Finding time to focus on executing a recruitment plan to boost patient enrollment
- Challenges associated with finding interested patients in a specific location
- Educating patients on clinical trials and how to get involved

How it works:

1. Patients motivated in receiving more information about clinical trials submit a simple form expressing study interest, location, and contact information.
2. Sponsors, CROs, and Sites submit information on current studies to gain patient interest.
3. PatientWise manages the potential patients and connects them to appropriate studies.

Strategic Benefits:

- Site coordinators and directors can take executing a recruitment plan of their to-do list
- Boost enrollment for specific clinical trials, even those challenging trials
- Potential patients gain a better understanding of what is a clinical trial is and how to participate.

Why should I participate in a clinical trial?
How can I get involved in a clinical trial?
If I qualify, what will be required of me during the clinical trial?
What are the risks and benefits of participating in a clinical trial?
Where can I find out about upcoming clinical trials in my area?

A clinical trial is a set of procedures conducted in medical research and drug development to make sure a new drug or device is safe and effective for a particular condition. These are the steps followed before the FDA will approve the new drug or device.

Participation in clinical trials allows access to medications and medical treatments that are not yet available to the general public. If you are going through treatment for a condition and are not satisfied with the results, a clinical trial might be a good option for you. Generally, the medication and examinations are provided at no cost and you may be compensated for your time and travel expenses.
